Being able to recall product in a timely manner is critical in the fast moving and diverse operations of retailers. Recalled product may be in distribution centers, on the shelf, in your deli or foodservice center, or it may be on the plate of a consumer.

You have a lot to manage on a day-to-day basis, let alone when a product recalls arises. You need a solution that allows you to quickly and effectively communicate the recall, obtain all the needed information from your supply chain to see if you are impacted, and then get back to work.

Once you decide to recall product from your supply chain, Share-ify RECALL helps you with tools to communicate and collect information quickly from your supply chain with a target goal of recalling product and confirming inventories in under two (2) hours.

Whether you need to contact your distribution centers or stores or places notices to customers, Share-ify RECALL allows you to quickly construct a distribution list wherein you can send information to the population of contacts and ask to receive information in return as to whether the location or party is impacted.

The recipient may be called and / or emailed and is prompted to complete the “Certificate of Destruction.” This auditable document is available online for completion and guides the notification recipient to say whether or not they have product, and if so, how much. It tells them what to do with the product if they have it and asks for a witnesses’ name alongside the user actually handling the recall procedures.

Communication to the recipients can include pictures, best practice guides and event specific information. All of this becomes available to the user recipient.
